Benton Hospital Contractor Asks Aid of President

Letter to Roosevelt Cites Endless Delays by the PWA

LABOR IS HARD HIT

Management Refuses to Resume Work Unless Funds Come Regularly

LITTLE ROCK.—Nathan Wohlfeld of Dallas, Texas, general contractor on the state hospital farm colony building near Benton, revealed Wednesday that he has resorted to a direct appeal to President Roosevelt in an effort to end the innumerable delays that have attended the handling and release of PWA funds borrowed by the state to pay for the new buildings.

The contractor notified Tom Davis, secretary of the Construction Commission, that he will not resume work until the commission receives from the federal government enough money to pay for all work done to date and to maintain an adequate crew of men without future interruptions.

Construction Commission received $214,000 yesterday in proceeds from bonds sold to the PWA and $4,250 in accrued interest. The money was deposited in the state treasury to the credit of the construction fund and a large part of it was disbursed immediately to the contractor to pay for work already done.

Payments made to the contractor yesterday totaled $72,752.03, of which more than $16,000 had been due him since last December. The commission still owes the contractor approximately $28,565 for work performed in February and March. It is estimated that the withheld pending completion and approval of the work, Mr. Wohlfeld said in his letter to the commission.

He said starting and shutting down several different times has demoralized his workmen, crippled his financial standing and affected several large plants which have been ordered to start producing material for the Benton project, only to be notified a few days later that work was held up because PWA funds had not been released.

"Before I was permitted to bid on this work, I had to furnish a financial statement to the PWA in Arkansas, and after bids were opened and before the job was awarded to me on my low bid, I had to further satisfy the PWA that I had sufficient funds with which to operate," the contractor wrote the president.

"Approximately two months elapsed before a work order was issued. As I understand, the Arkansas Construction Commission had to satisfy their financial arrangement before the PWA would permit an order to be issued for the contract work to go ahead. All this had a tendency to satisfy me that this particular job was free of restraining incumbrances and that since it met the requirements of the PWA, a government agency, if the United States was willing to invest in that project, surely it would be a safe transaction for me to get into, and this prompted me to spend all my resources and now that

Harrison's Bonus Bill Is Debated on Senate Floor

NRA Amendments Choked Off by Coalition of Two Parties

NEW DEAL RAPPED

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Flays Entire Legislative Program

WASHINGTON.—(P)—The cash bonus issue was placed squarely before the senate Thursday as debate was opened on the Harrison compromise bill.

Senator Clark, Missouri Democrat, offered the American Legion-Vinson full-payment measure as a substitute. Clark said he was confident this bill would be adopted.

Reject NRA Amendments WASHINGTON.—(P)—A powerful bi-partisan coalition in the senate finance committee Thursday rejected all amendments to the resolution extending the NRA until next April 1, and voted 15 to 4 to report the resolution favorably to the senate.

Blind From C. of C. WASHINGTON.—(P)—A resolution strongly attacking virtually every phase of the New Deal's legislative program was adopted Thursday by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The United States Chamber of Commerce elected Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y., president. Sibley is a personal friend of President Roosevelt, although opposed to administration policies.

Philbuster Ends WASHINGTON.—(P)—Smartering from a semi-serious presidential criticism of the senate's lethargy, Democratic leaders, aided by Republicans, Wednesday put aside the senate anti-lynching bill filibuster in favor of the bonus issue.

A move to adjourn which had failed on three previous occasions, finally carried 48 to 32 after several Republicans and Democrats had rallied to the Southern cause and Senator Borah, Idaho Republican independent, had assailed from the floor constitutionality of the Costigan-Wagner measure to give the federal government power in lynching cases. Many senators credited Borah with breaking the deadlock.

Thus ended a seven-day successful filibuster against the motion of Senator Costigan, Democrat, Colorado, to amend the bill and Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, have been pressing. The maneuver automatically displaced from its calendar position Costigan's motion and shortly afterward Vice President Garner recognized Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, who proposed that the bonus be taken up.

The motion carried without a record vote. The bonus debate, however, was put off until Thursday because Senator Robinson, Democrat leader who had moved the temporary adjournment, decided to get at an accumulated list of secondary bills.

President Facing Defeat WASHINGTON.—(P)—A sudden crystallization of senate sentiment for crippling the wings of NRA and extending its lease of life only until next April, Wednesday pointed to the possibility of a major legislative defeat for President Roosevelt.

This trend of sentiment held promise for a much quicker adjournment of congress and constituted a serious blow to the chances of the Wagner labor bill.

The senate finance committee voted Wednesday to report a resolution for the brief extension of the recovery law with modifications. Party leaders immediately lined up their forces to put the resolution through quickly and without change. Friends of the labor disputes measure had counted heavily on forcing its consideration as an amendment to the NRA bill.

Under the program approved by the finance committee, the present recovery law would be extended by a resolution continuing the present law until April 1, 1936, with price-fixing and regulation of interstate business eliminated. Price-fixing would be permitted in natural resource industries.

Arguments Begin Meanwhile, government attorneys—Stanley Reed of the Justice Department and Daniel R. Keogh of NRA—prepared for the opening of crucial arguments before the Supreme Court Thursday on the constitutionality of NRA. They filed a brief with the court Wednesday afternoon.

Pleading with the country to join in a "great crusade to destroy enforced idleness," President Roosevelt is shown in the White House as he broadcast his fire-side message explaining his $1,880,000,000 work-relief program. He declared recovery is under way, "despite the few who seek to confuse the public and profit by their confusion."

Political "Pull" Fails; He's Jailed

Politicians Rally Around J. K. Gibson, But Without Avail

POCAHONTAS, Ark.—(P)—Authorities here said Thursday that a man booked as John H. Gibson in connection with the Hotel Randolph fire is being held in the Corning jail in default of $10,000 bond.

Sheriff Thompson, of Pocahontas, said no bond has yet been presented him for Gibson or the man booked as H. E. Smith, operator of a Walnut Ridge hotel, whose bond also was set at $10,000.

POCAHONTAS, Ark.—The boasted "political pull" of John K. Gibson, Lawrence county politician, planter, banker and confessed dealer in stolen goods failed to keep him out of jail Wednesday night.

Arrested on the street at Walnut Ridge at 3 Wednesday afternoon, Gibson, accused of complicity in an arson plot, was brought here, his bond was fixed at $10,000 and he immediately was hurried out of town to an unannounced destination by Sheriff John T. Thompson.

Sheriff Thompson's action in departing suddenly with his prisoner was not explained. It could not be ascertained definitely whether the sheriff feared that lawyers would secure Gibson's release on a habeas corpus writ or whether he was afraid to take chances that Gibson might receive violent treatment here. There is intense indignation here over Sunday's destruction of the Hotel Randolph, the finest ostlerly in this section, an act of vandalism in which Gibson is alleged to have had a part.

Several political leaders from Lawrence county were here Wednesday trying to arrange bond for Gibson and H. E. Smith. The number included ex-Senator Harry L. Ponder of Walnut Ridge.

Smith still is held in jail here in default of $10,000 bond. Ex-Senator Ponder said that the bond for Smith would be raised but Wednesday night Smith still was in jail.

MacDonald Announces Air Fleet Increase to Match Germans

PARIS, France.—(P)—A Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact designed to defend France and Russia against a German attack was signed Thursday by Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, and Ambassador Potemkin, of Russia.

New German Recruits BERLIN, Germany.—(P)—General Goering, minister of aviation, said Thursday that Germany's first class of conscripts since compulsory military training service was abolished by the Versailles treaty would be called to the colors October 1 for one year's service.

This statement came after Goering had announced that the German air force is more than a match for any assailant.

Copyright Associated Press LONDON, Eng.—(P)—Prime Minister MacDonald announced Thursday that the British government is "already taking steps to further accelerate the expansion of British air forces" in order to maintain parity with neighboring powers.

MacDonald said, "We propose to put our defense power into such a state as to enable our people to feel protected."

Copyright Associated Press LONDON, Eng.—(P)—Great Britain, an authoritative source revealed Wednesday night, will spend an extra $25,000,000 this year to keep abreast of Germany in Europe's headlong air armaments race. The amount will be expended in addition to the $105,000,000 already provided in air estimates for the current fiscal year.

The proposal, regarded as an answer to Adolf Hitler's boast that the Reich now is as strong in the air as Great Britain, is expected to be the highlight of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's "important announcement" opening the House of Commons debate on foreign affairs Thursday.

The prime minister, speaking in the Commons Wednesday, said that the British government stood behind an article he wrote last week assailing Germany's swift rearmament as perilous to the continent's peace.

A new declaration on foreign policy and national defense to be presented Parliament Thursday, the authoritative sources said, will contain assurances that Britain is taking the necessary measures to keep her defenses adequate to meet Germany's weapons.

Life Sentence for Daughter-Slayer

Sentence Pronounced on Mrs. Jenkins at Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK.—Life sentence in the penitentiary was pronounced Wednesday on Mrs. Minnie Rose Jenkins, 30, convicted by a First Division Circuit Court jury several weeks ago of the poison murder of Alta Fern, 8, her daughter. Mrs. Jenkins will be removed to the state prison for women at Alexander Thursday. Judge McGeehey after passing sentence deferred action on a motion for new trial. Mrs. Jenkins was indicted for the murder of two other children and also for two attempts on the life of her husband.

The mural depicts Al Capone in the center with a big blonde sitting on his knee and displaying a bit of her own knees. Also the girl had one arm draped about Al's neck.

Bitter comment from the underworld ran: "She ain't no syndicate gal. Al never gave a tumble to a skirt like that. He wouldn't give her a job washin' glasses in a speak."

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Seek Doctor's Advice Before Childbirth.

Nowadays the intelligent woman knows that she must seek her doctor regularly during the months before her child is born if she wants to be sure that the baby is developing properly and that her own health is being suitably safeguarded.

Such prenatal care serves to relieve the prospective mother of all anxiety and helps to keep well women well. Its chief purpose is to single out the women in whom complications are developing, or who may be going blindly into a difficult time, and to enable the doctor to advise them to prevent complications and make child birth easier.

Most modern specialists in the care of prospective mothers will advise women fully concerning their hygiene during this time, and will refer them also to books and pamphlets of advice which are useful guides to prevention of difficulties.

Just as soon as a woman knows that she is going to have a baby she should ask her physician for a complete examination. By such examination he will know in advance the possibilities that may arise, and frequently the examination, properly made and interpreted, means the difference between a successful childbirth and a failure.

During the months before the child is born, the prospective mother should wear comfortable clothing and avoid abnormal constrictions around the waist, round elastic garters, or high heels, because of the danger of disturbances from such accessories to the costume.

The prospective mother should take a little exercise each day. Walking in the fresh air is the best form, and moderate dancing is permitted. All strenuous exercises are forbidden.

The prospective mother should attempt to get a little rest each day and also a full night's sleep each night. She should have warm but not too hot baths.

Her diet should be moderate, including meat, poultry, or fish once each day, with raw fruits and green vegetables as large part of the diet.

Her doctor will also advise her relative to the taking of cod liver oil and calcium for the saving of her teeth and to provide the baby with sound bones and teeth.

If the mother smokes, she should certainly limit the total number of cigarettes to not more than five to ten daily. There is evidence that continuous smoking while nursing increases the heart beat of the baby and may eventually be harmful.

A BOOK

A DAY

Why Machines Fail to Make Us All Rich

"Tools of Tomorrow," by Jonathan Norton Leonard, is a hopeful and exciting book. It represents one more effort to give the state of our society by analyzing the extent to which we have used our technical triumphs to promote human happiness, and it is both provocative and inspiring.

Some time ago, says Mr. Leonard, a traveler left a Sears-Roebuck catalog in a Tibetan lamaseri. The innocent lamas looked, wide-eyed, at the pictures, and took to sending in money orders; and presently the lamaseri was cluttered up with useless refrigerators, lawn mowers, auto tires, and such-like.

They were all perfectly useless, because the lamas had not the faintest notion what to do with them; but they were pretty, and they pleased the lamas immensely.

Modern society, he suggests, is in much the same shape as these lamas. It has an abundance of lovely mechanical contrivances of enormous potential usefulness, but to date it has hardly begun to find out what to do with them.

When it does find out, things will begin to hum; until then there will be great waste and much needless want. Mr. Leonard analyzes our natural resources and finds them, to all intents and purposes, limitless. He believes that there is almost no technical advance that we cannot make; but he points out that we have let financial, social, and political considerations get in the way so that while we have a more stupendous quantity of "slave labor" to work for us than was ever dreamed of before, we are unable to put it to work efficiently. You'll find his book well worth reading. Viking offers it for $3.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Work Affords Child Escape From Reality

Reality—the whole controversy of human happiness seems to center about its vortex.

From babyhood on, the pull of the sensitive soul seems to be against it. The child cries. The man sits down in despair or plunges into excess. Both manifest failure to face things as they are.

All through life we seek escapes, choosing the means suitable to our own temperament. Some buy, and keep on buying—the thrill of possession is one avenue of release. Some depend on vicarious experience through books, plays, movies. Others forget the bugaboo of the world in excessive bridge or sport. Men seek fortune, women careers, and so on.

Escaping reality, escaping things as they are. Fighting against the nettle, refusing to dig the obvious and thumbing the plums from the pie in an effort to forget.

Work Is Good Remedy

Little Jack Horner did sit in a corner, you know, away from it all, probably with his back to the room where there were lessons to do or dishes to stack or the grate to clean.

Fantasy with sensitive children who find factual world too hard—who would rather read alone or sleep it off or cry a lot—might find it better to use work as a palliative instead of a stream of bright quarters or a succession of new toys.

Not that thrills or gifts are harmful—far from it—but they have their place and neither thrill nor possession ever proved medicine for failure to be happy.

Happiness comes from self and nowhere else. And there is absolutely no glow on earth like the feeling that one has put a job through.

Criticism May Be Harmful Even a child, given tasks that a child can do, of course, will usually react surprisingly. He won't if he is criticized too much or if the work is entirely unbecoming to his nature—everyone is different. But even so, once he's liked a job he's going to feel pretty good.

Thrills and possessions are all right in their way because it is human to play and human to possess, but if the mother is looking for a real cure, something that will come from within the heart itself, she will think up ways and means for action.

Hobbies help, they are a beginning and not an end. Real jobs well done cause a glow of pride nothing "escape" for any of us. This and the feeling of helping others.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Spring Mode Gives Beauty New Color

Correct makeup to wear with the most popular spring colors is a question that seems to be bothering a good many beauty-minded women these days.

It's not difficult to decide on the right rouge, lipstick, eyeshadow and powder if you intend to stick to navy blue or black. However, if you have gone in for the subtle tints shades of the new musical comedy colors, you ought to spend hours over a cosmetic counter before you make one single purchase.

Keep in mind, of course, that all makeup is used simply to enhance the natural beauty with which nature endowed you. You shouldn't try to figure out fantastic ways and means to apply rouge and makeup in the hope that you will be able to change features that dispose you, or you won't be successful anyway. Unless you do your work behind footlights or know full well that all of your dancing for an evening will be done under amber lights, there's no use hoping that rouge will make your chin look smaller or that lipstick applied beyond the natural line of the lips will change the contour of your mouth. The best you can do is to keep smiling and to wear makeup that harmonizes with your own coloring and which does not clash with the clothes you wear.

When you start out to buy cosmetics to go with a special outfit, wear that outfit. Ask the saleswoman to let you try various tones to see which are most becoming. It's impossible to make flat rules about what rouge to wear with chartreuse—which lipstick looks well with orange. A great deal depends on your own skin tones. You simply have to experiment.

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

© 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY MILLICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRIMGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunette, then takes her home, introducing her as his wife. She meets HARRY HAP, NORMAN HAP, his stepson, ROBERT CAISE, MRS. HARRY DICK GENTRY, HARRY's partner, VERA DUCHENE, Mrs. HAP's maid.

In HAP's home Millicent sees the mysterious "woman in black" whom she believes has some connection with Drimgold's death.

The chauffeur is found dead. Later HAP is kidnapped. Millicent and Norman learn the car driven by the woman in black belongs to PHYLLIS FAULCONER. They go to her apartment, find there the missing suitcase of books showing a shortage of $200,000 in Gentry's accounts.

Millicent and Norman leave and later return. HAP goes in a cab. When he does not reappear Millicent enters. The place is in wild disorder. A policeman arrives. HAP escapes in a cab, gets out and sends the driver back to wait for Norman.

She sees Bob Caise and Vera approaching and steps into a darkened doorway.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIII

MILLICENT remained flattened against the wall of the doorway. She could hear the pounding of her heart. She could also hear the pounding of steps on the pavement as Vera Duchene and Bob Caise came walking directly toward her.

What had brought them? Had they trailed her in some way or was it merely a coincidence that she had happened upon them? She had no means of knowing, but she sensed that were she discovered in this deserted side street she would probably never live to tell of her encounter. Ever since she had seen those sinister dark spots in the room where Norman Hap had gone to call upon the mysterious Phyllis Faulconer she had realized the desperation of the people who were opposing her.

Vera Duchene and her escort walked directly past the doorway. Millicent caught her breath in a quick intake as Vera Duchene's arm almost brushed against her shoulder.

As they walked past she heard Vera Duchene say, "... everything's under cover now. We can let them investigate and be damned."

"No," Bob said, "there remains that girl. We've got to ... turn her in on the Drimgold job." Vera Duchene said crisply, "That's all we need to ... Sergeant Mahoney will ..."

Millicent was unable to hear exactly how Vera Duchene finished but she thought she knew exactly what the pair were planning to do. She would have given much to hear conversation which would have given her an inkling of what had happened to Norman Hap, but realized this would be expecting too much.

SHE dared not venture forth from the protection of the doorway until after she heard the steps of the pair recede in the distance and knew that they had rounded the corner. Even then she waited for almost a minute before venturing to walk down toward the main traffic artery. She wanted to get a taxi cab and go at once to the hotel where she was registered as Millicent Jones. She knew that if Norman Hap could break loose he would communicate with her there. Millicent caught a cab at the corner, went at once to the hotel. The clerk eyed her with casual curiosity.

"Has anyone been calling for me?" she asked. "None."

"You're sure?" "Of course I'm sure. No one's called you."

"Listen," she told him, "I'm going out, but if anyone calls for me, would you mind telling them that Miss Jones left a message that she is quite all right and will be back here to pick up any messages in about an hour from now?"

She slipped a dollar from her purse and said, "It's really most important."

The flabby fingers of the man behind the desk closed on the dollar. "Okay," he said, showing the first bit of friendly interest he had displayed toward her. "I'll see that your message is delivered. Miss Jones. But who shall I deliver it to? Just anyone that calls?"

"Just anyone that calls," she said. "Anyone who asks for me."

Her cab was waiting at the door. She decided to risk detection by going back to the apartment house and ascertaining if the cab driver had discovered anything in his tour of the apartments.

SHE entered the cab, gave the driver the address and sat back against the cushions, her mind racing with a confused sequence of thoughts. She barely noticed the passing of time until the cab arrived at the apartment house. She saw the friendly cab driver sitting behind the wheel of his cab which was parked at the curb. She paid off the driver of the cab in which she was riding, walked up to her friend and said in a low voice, "Did you find anything?"

He gave a start of surprise, whirled around to face her and said, "Take it easy, Miss. That's a radio car over there at the curb. Someone's made a squawk and a couple of radio cars are investigating apartment 309. There's been a fight up there and somebody got hurt."

"Did they say who it was?" "No. Just a bunch of busted furniture and some blood stains. I took a squawk at the directory. A fane named Phyllis Faulconer lives there."

"Did you cover the rest of the apartments?" "Yes, but I couldn't find any trace of your friend. They all looked on the up and up to me—that is, those that answered. Three or four of them didn't answer the door, or maybe they'd gone to bed, or they might be out ... but, listen, Miss, if there's a beef anywhere you'd better beat it because the guys from the radio car are going to be out in a minute and there's a guy with 'em who's probably the chap who made the squawk in the first place. He looks like he was the guy you was talking me about that was on the force."

She flashed him a grateful glance, and, acting on impulse, gave him her hand.

He patted it reassuringly and said, "Hop in and let me drive you around the corner."

"No," she said, "I'll walk. I'll make it all right."

She walked rapidly around the corner and noticed with some annoyance that she had developed a habit of looking back over her shoulder to see if she were being followed.

She found that, without conscious volition on her part, she was mechanically retracing the course which had been taken by the taxi cab when she had fled from the apartment and suddenly realized that her route would take her past the big garage which the cab driver had pointed out to her when she had asked him to park.

That must be where Vera Duchene and Bob Caise had been going when they had walked so rapidly and purposefully past her.

SHE increased her pace, walked to the garage, entered it and smiled at the man on duty.

"A man and a woman came in here about half an hour ago," she said, "for an automobile. I wonder if there's any chance you would remember the car or the people."

"What sort of car?" he asked. "I don't know, but I think it was a cabriolet—not one that's stored here regularly."

He shook his head. "No," he said, "I don't think there's been a transient car in here all evening. Most of our stuff is storage by the month."

An idea flashed quickly through her mind. "Do you store a car for a Phyllis Faulconer?" she asked. "Why, yes," he said. "A black sedan, license number 938410."

"That's the one," she said excitedly. "Could I see it for a moment?"

He looked at her suspiciously, but she gave him a reassuring smile. "I just want to look at it," she said. "I'm very much interested."

"It's on the second floor," he said. "I guess I should go up with you, but you look all right, so I'll let you go on up by yourself. I've got to stay on duty down here."

She thought then that there was something peculiarly significant about his expression. It was as though he wanted to warn her of some impending danger, yet dared not do so.

She started toward the stairs to the second floor, but turned when she had gone a few steps to give him one more glance.

This time there could be no mistake. He was looking at her with an expression of pity, but he turned his eyes away almost as soon as she encountered his gaze.

Millicent decided that, after all, it was merely her imagination. She climbed the stairs to the second floor. An elevator was in the corner of a big room, divided into stalls in which automobiles were parked, side by side.

Millicent found the car she wanted—a black sedan, license 938410. She wondered if perhaps there might be some clue in this car which would help her locate Norman Hap. She opened the door opposite the driver's seat, climbed up to the front seat and leaned forward to inspect the registration certificate.

She felt the springs of the car sway.

Someone had been concealed in the rear of that car, someone who was now moving.

She looked back over her shoulder, and encountered a clutching hand reaching out for her arm.

She screamed.

HANES and I are just like THAT

"I'll eat my shirt if these Hanes Shirts aren't the swellest you ever put on your back! Man—they're feather-weight, and cool. Hanes knits them, somehow, with a husky snap so they get right up close to your hide. You don't know you've got one on! It moves in every direction you bend—just like it was painted on you. I'll tell you something else about Hanes! They last their shirts plenty long. You never see me with a bulge around my waist, do you? These shirts stay where they belong—down inside your shorts. Yes, Sir, Hanes and I are just like that. I'm for them!"

Shorts to match the comfort of Hanes Shirts! Lots of crotch-room and seat-room. Hanes Shorts are off your mind when they're on your hips. Nothing hitches or binds! Colors guaranteed.

Washington Is to Graduate Friday

Prof. Matt L. Ellis, of Henderson, Commencement Speaker

Graduation exercises for the 1935 class of the Washington High School will be held at the school auditorium on Friday night, with Prof. Matt L. Ellis, professor of economics, Henderson State Teachers College, Arkadelphia, delivering the address to the graduates.

The baccalaureate sermon was delivered by Dr. J. C. Williams from his pulpit in the local Presbyterian church last Sunday morning. Dr. Williams gave the graduates some good advice on honesty and faithfulness regarding what might be the seeming gains by other means. The church was crowded for his address.

Final examinations are the order of the day at the school this week. All examinations will be completed by Thursday.

Georgia Bullard will deliver the valedictory address and Mary Pilkinton will deliver the salutatory.

Members of this year's graduation class are as follows: Georgia Bullard, Mary Pilkinton, Myrtle Bearden, Willie Williams and Carl Martin.

Members of the junior class are Vivian Beck, Lucille Hulsey, Joella Gold, Margaret Pruitt, Lester Watkins and Stacy Thrasher.

Indigestion, Sour Stomach

WHEN you feel rundown, or your stomach gives trouble with gas or "sour risings," try that well-known tonic, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Read what Mrs. A. N. Alston of Route 5, Box 364 B, Muskogee, Okla., said: "I have been a sufferer from indigestion for some time. At times I would choke up with gas. I suffered from heartburn also. At times my food seemed to sour in my stomach and there was such a bad taste in my mouth, but after using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I found that I could eat almost anything—had very little distress."

Jolson and Keeler on Local Screen

"Go Into Your Dance" at Saenger Thursday
and Friday

The sensation of the year in the film world is the teaming of Al Jolson, famous Mammy singer who first introduced the talking pictures, and Ruby Keeler, his wife, former Broadway musical comedy star who leaped to fame in the movies in two years, in what is said to be the greatest, musical spectacle, "Go Into Your Dance," now showing at the Saenger theater.

While the picture is a mammoth musical spectacle, it carries a well defined plot and a fascinating romance with tense emotional scenes, inter-persed with hilarious comedy relief.
The story is by Bradford Ropes, the author of "2nd Street."

Al Jolson has the role of a Broadway entertainer, who is barred from the New York stage, because he quits
his shows without notice, his weakness being wine, women and the "ponies." He winds up in Caliente at the race tracks, waking up with a headache and without a job.

Glenn Rogers plays the part of his devoted sister who gets him straightened up, and finally convincing him
that Broadway is through with him, persuades him to take a job in Chicago with a partner. She has already persuaded Ruby Keeler, who has the role of a clever dancer on the West Coast to team with her brother.

After a series of exciting incidents
the New York opening comes off in a blaze of glory in an unusual and surprising climax.

There is a talented supporting cast
which includes Helen Morgan, Barton McLane, Sharon Lynne, Fatsy Kelly,
and Benny Rubin. A return showing of the best and prettiest of all, al-color musical novelties, "La Cucurachra" completes the program.

Lost Love Has No

a pit, settles in a study chair, and outlines the situation:

"Suit Informs Value"

"If a man falls out of love with a girl to whom he is engaged, the girl may as well get it done as a loss, and find some one else. There are disappointments in life, you know, and we should be prepared for them."

"If the girl sues for money she is saying in effect that the marriage relationship with the man still has some value for her. How? He no longer loves her."

"If it is a case where the parents of the man alienate his affections, the girl has lost nothing again. That man is tied to his parents and is unable to do anything for himself."

"If a wife is using another woman
for alienating her husband's affections,
then the case should be viewed as a business partnership which is breaking up. But she should get some financial aid to help her until she re-adjusts herself as a worker."

"Too often the person who loses
the affections of the loved one is suffering from hurt pride as much as from anything else. They want to "hurl back," so they file suit for breach of promise or for alienation of affections."

"The suit is a form of revenge and revenge is harmful. While it burns itself out the person suffering from it is little good for anything else right at a period when he should be readjusting himself to new conditions."

"I advise her or him to get some regular meals, some regular sleep,
and to hunt new friends."

Different in Other Days
"Head-bain legislation probably originated when the marriage relation was regarded more solemnly than it is now. The girl was disappointed in her expectations. She demanded remuneration. The attitude points to the importance the girl placed on the economic advantage which would come to her through marriage."

"There is something funny anyway
about most people who fall in love.
They seem to have a pattern which the other person must meet. Of course the other person doesn't fit the pattern, but the pattern maker is always just as surprised about the five-hundredth time he discovers the fact as he was the first. Such patterns should be modified, and many emotional problems would be stopped before they start."

Stingley Family in Reunion, Washington

The family of the Rev. W. H. Stingley of Washington held a reunion last week end with all members present.
The reunion was held in honor of Mr.
Stingley's son, Jim, who has been in North Carolina the past five years.
Other members of the family present were Mr. Stingley's son Ford, of Avery, Texas, and his little grandson, Jimmy; Mr. and Mrs. Willie Harris and children of Platt, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Jess Yarbbery of Hope, and Mr.
and Mrs. Joe Jackson and family of Washington.

This is the first trip back home in three years for Jim who, in June, will graduate from the North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering with a degree in forestry. He has already been appointed district forester for the Western District of North Carolina and will take over his post on May 15, having completed his college course. He will have a leave of absence in order to graduate with his class in June, Jim, together with other students in the school of forestry passed through Arkansas on a 5,000-mile trip through the southern states studying manufacturing and natural resources as the last part of his course.
It was in connection with this trip that he was enabled to stop over for several days with his family here.

There also comes announcement of Jim's marriage to Miss Ethel Pauline Hood of Raleigh, N. C., which took place on March 30 of this year. After May 15 Mr. and Mrs. Stingley will be located in Le Noir, N. C., where Jim will be stationed.

Willie Harris, son-in-law of Mr.
Stingley and former county treasurer and circuit clerk, is now located near the town of Platt, Texas in the Rio Grande Valley, where he has operated a tourist camp since last October. Ford Stingley is in the lumber business in Avery, Texas where he has been located for the past six or more years.

This was the first time in about four years that all members of the family had been together.

Says Laborers Suffered

The contractor wrote the president that common laborers on the job could not show an average earning of more

The letter concluded:
"I therefore ask your assistance in my statements and I feel confident that you will find the conditions as described are true and that my claims are just."

Two States May Lose Relief Fund

Illinois and Pennsylvania
Faced With Federal Ultimatum

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Federal relief officials maintained silence Wednesday on whether federal funds would be withheld during May from Illinois and Pennsylvania and their more than 3,000,000 needy. Both states had failed to meet relief administration demands for larger relief contributions.

Missouri was removed from the same category by passage Wednesday of an appropriation $500,000 for relief this month. Secretary L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, declined to comment, but the Missouri state administrator ordered activities resumed.

Illinois Closes Up Relief Depots

Legislature Still Battling
Over U. S. Ultimatum on Funds

CHICAGO, Ill.—(AP)—The Illinois
Emergency relief Commission, improv-vised by the suspension of federal aid, closed all its state stations to 1-200,000 clients Tuesday night.

The unemployed in many sections were forced to turn to their own resources or private charity for their subsistence but the majority were assured essential provisions for the next few days.

Chicago police took precautions against violence. Communists were reported to have planned May Day demonstrations at all relief stations in the city. Patrolmen have been posted at the offices.

A bill designed to end the crisis and resume federal grants came up for second reading in the house at Spring field. Its fate was uncertain. Should it be adopted Wednesday, FERA Administrator Harry Hopkins has indicated he immediately would advance $9,000,000.

Raymond Ross and family spent Sunday night with Mr. and Mrs. Leo Collier.

H. M. Ross and Walter Lee Allen were visiting in Blevins Sunday afternoon.

Cardui for Certain Pains

"Several years ago, I suffered a lot at menstruation time," writes Mrs. Oscar Branham, of Vicksburg, Miss.
"I took Cardui and I believe it helped all this trouble. Last year, I the need of Cardui again, for pain
my head and back at my menstrual period. I went back to Cardui. Now I do not suffer. I feel just fine and can go ahead with my work at other times. I feel that any time I spend money for Cardui I am getting value received."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit
